

Ryerson University's Community Access Project

Aditya Jha's generous support has enabled 28 high school students from the Pathways to Education Program to participate in Marketing 100, a credit course offered through the Ted Rogers School of Management, Ryerson University, as part of RUN (Ryerson University Now!).

The RUN program is designed to motivate students who have been marginalized as a result of economics, ethnicity, family or personal circumstances, health issues or a disability to consider post-secondary education as a genuine option for their own future. The program makes post-secondary education familiar, accessible and non-threatening.

The Pathways to Education program is a recognized best practice that ensures a far greater proportion of at-risk young people will successfully complete high school, continue on to post-secondary programs and become actively engaged in their career development.
